

Critical Health Education – HEJ special issue

Health Education Journal (HEJ), first published in 1943 and one of the world's leading peer reviewed journals in health and education, is delighted to announce a special issue containing selected papers from the 1st Critical Health Education Studies Conference.

Edited by Katie Fitzpatrick, Deana Leahy and Peter Aggleton, the special issue will address some or all of the following conference themes:

- Critical health education – perspectives and approaches
- Social theory and health education
- Health education – structure and affect
- Teaching critically about health
- Tackling 'difficult' issues in health education

Instructions for Submission

The deadline for submission is 1 October 2018. Manuscripts should follow Health Education Journal's formatting guidelines, which are available on the journal homepage under Submit Paper <http://journals.sagepub.com/home/hej/>

Papers must not exceed 6,000 words in length, including references, figures and tables.

If you would like to discuss your paper informally with one of the special issue editors, please contact either Katie Fitzpatrick (k.fitzpatrick@auckland.ac.nz) or Deana Leahy (deana.leahy@monash.edu) in advance.

Please submit your paper through the journal's online submission and review site: <https://uk.sagepub.com/en-gb/asi/journal/health-education-journal#submission-guidelines>

Please mark your paper clearly for consideration for inclusion in the Critical Health Education special issue. All papers submitted will undergo the standard peer review process.

General enquiries about the journal can be emailed to the editor-in-chief, Peter Aggleton (p.aggleton@unsw.edu.au) or to the journal administrator, Fiona Thirlwell (healtheducationjournal@gmail.com).
